

CONCLUSION

One of the cornerstones of Good Governance is accountability. The SAPS is therefore obliged to inform the citizen on what is intended to achieve predetermined objectives. These predetermined objectives are contained in the Strategic Plan and the Annual Budget of the SAPS.

It is evident that the accountability process culminates with the publishing of the Annual Report which serves to inform the citizens of this country as to what progress the SAPS has made in the achievement of its objectives.

The 2004/2005 of the SAPS fairly represents its performance and financial position for the period under review.

Through a continuous and wide-ranging process performance review, both at individual and organizational levels, the SAPS has consistently developed and improved the assessment of its performance and that of its personnel, in relation to its strategic objectives, indicators and targets, and will continue to do so into the forthcoming financial year.

The challenge to provide more with less continues. Through partnership, mutual co-operation and support, and the effective implementation of key Government policy, we are working towards establishing a police service of which every South African can be proud.
